TINTON FALLS, N.J., Oct. 11, 2017 /PRNewswire/ -- Commvault (NASDAQ: CVLT), a global leader in enterprise backup, recovery, archive and the cloud, today announced more than 150 speaking sessions on data management, protection and activation at Commvault GO 2017, its second annual customer conference, to be held Nov. 6-8, 2017 in Washington D.C. Commvault also announced that Kenneth Cukier, senior editor of digital products at The Economist, will emcee the event's general keynote sessions. With an agenda that includes more than 95 breakout, 30 mini theater, and 25 structured lab speaking sessions, as well as industry-specific and other expert-led learning sessions, Commvault GO 2017 will be this year's leading event for business leaders seeking to take charge of their data to find a path to the remarkable.

At the conference, industry thought leaders, customers, and partners, including executives from Commvault, Google, Microsoft and Cisco, will explore how enterprises can protect, manage and activate data to unlock new business opportunities and address some of today's most pressing data challenges, including how to:

- Accelerate digital business transformation
- Fast-track movement to next generation on-premises cloud infrastructure
- Optimize management and protection of data in public, private and hybrid clouds
- Meet new Dev-Test and disaster recovery data requirements
- Automate ransomware and other cyberattack detection and recovery
- Build a data foundation that simplifies and expedites the development of data analytics applications
- Get ahead of GDPR and other new privacy and personal data regulations

"Commvault GO's deep and wide agenda tackles the most urgent and exciting data questions and issues faced by business and IT leaders today, offering attendees a unique opportunity to learn how to best protect data and use it to achieve remarkable results," said Chris Powell, chief marketing officer, Commvault. "It is a must attend event for those looking for insights on how the latest innovations in data protection and management can be best employed to create value in today's digital economy."
