

Clumio Achieves FedRAMP® Class C (Moderate) Ready Milestone

September 2, 2026

Achievement marks the next step in expanding cloud-native data protection and cyber resilience for federal agencies and highly regulated organizations

TINTON FALLS, N.J., Sept. 2, 2026 /PRNewswire/ -- Commvault (NASDAQ: CVLT), a leader in unified resilience at enterprise scale, today announced that Clumio, a Commvault company, has achieved FedRAMP® Class C (Moderate) Ready status and is now also listed in the FedRAMP Marketplace as Legacy FedRAMP Ready. This is a milestone in expanding cloud-native cyber resilience for federal and highly regulated customers and marks an important step in Clumio's journey toward a future Class C FedRAMP Certification.

"Government agencies and regulated organizations expect both modern cloud innovation and cyber resilience," said Woon Jung, Chief Technology Officer, Clumio. "This achievement reflects our commitment to helping organizations adopt cloud technologies confidently while meeting rigorous security expectations."

Clumio provides simplified, multi-cloud protection and resilience. With Clumio listed in the FedRAMP Marketplace, regulated customers have visibility into the offering as part of the federal procurement process. The milestone complements Commvault's broader public sector portfolio, giving customers more choice when protecting environments subject to federal security standards.
